

ABSTRACT

A computer-implemented method, system and computer program product are provided for determining an optimal price. First, a plurality of parameters is received including, but not limited to a plurality of prices associated with a price-frequency mathematical distribution, a number of competitors, a business objective, and a cost associated with a good or service. Thereafter, an optimal price is calculated based on the input parameters.